Each president since George Washington has had a Cabinet.	6
The Senate must approve them. It is the exception rather than the	13 rule for the president's choice to be rejected by this branch of the	20 government. In keeping with tradition, most of the Cabinet	26 members belong to the same political party as the president.	32
The purpose of the Cabinet is to provide advice to the	37 president on matters pertaining to the job of the president. The	44 person holding the office, of course, may or may not follow the	50 advice. Some presidents have frequently utilized their Cabinet.	57
Others have used it little or not at all. For example, President	63
Wilson held no Cabinet meetings at all during World War I.	69
